Question Tour Block 1

Text / Graphic | Text / Graphic introduction

We are conducting a research study on how claims in scientific papers are structured in computer science field. We are thus recruiting annotators to assign claims with one of the three labels (Supported/Refuted/Not Enough Infor) by providing the scientific table evidence.

Successful participants will be paid at S$15/hour (w.r.t workload).

Please fill in your information below to apply to register as a participant of our research project. All personal information will be kept confidential and only be used for the study. We will contact you via NUS email within 3 days if you are selected.

English Proficiency

Please select your English Proficiency

- ☐ Native Speaker, i.e., Someone at this language proficiency level was either raised speaking the language as their native tongue or has been speaking it so long that they are completely fluent. They have little or no accent.
- ☐ Full Professional Proficiency, i.e., Someone at this level can have advanced discussions on a wide range of topics about personal life, current events, and technical topics. People at this level may still have a minor accent and may occasionally misspeak or make minor mistakes. Their vocabulary is extensive and they can carry on conversations with ease.
- ☐ Professional Working Proficiency, i.e., Someone at this language proficiency level can make contributions to meetings, have conversations with professors. They can speak at a normal speed in the language and has a fairly extensive vocabulary. They likely still have an accent at this level and probably require help understanding subtle and nuanced phrasing.
- ☐ Limited Working Proficiency, i.e., Someone at this level can handle basic study requirements and social phrases. They can carry on limited casual conversations at the class and discuss their personal life. Someone at this level still needs help with more extensive conversations in the language. They can only operate independently in basic conversations.
- ☐ Elementary Proficiency, i.e., Someone can only form basic sentences, including asking and answering simple questions.
